Additional clearances are required for TS-cleared personnel to work on certain highly sensitive... Many positions in federal government agencies and the military require a Top Secret (TS) or Sensitive Compartmented Information (SCI) clearance for key staff who will handle sensitive information. To apply for either of these clearances, you must have a job offer from an employer that requires it for your position. Employees of certain federal contractors who provide services to federal agencies might need a security clearance, too. TS and SCI clearances are valid for five years. TS and SCI Clearance Application Process. When you receive a job offer for a position that has a security clearance requirement, your offer is conditional. NOTICE: Department of State Personnel Security and Suitability Customer Service Center Phone Being Spoofed. The DoS Personnel Security and Suitability (PSS) Customer Service Center’s telephone number (571-345-3186) has been spoofed. If you receive a call from what appears to be the PSS CSC, and the caller is asking you to provide personal information, know that it may be fraudulent. DSS conducts more than 38,000 personnel security actions each year for the Department of State and other federal agencies. The Background Investigation Process. There are three levels of security clearance: confidential, secret, and top secret. Who decides the level of clearance? A security clearance is a status granted to individuals allowing them access to classified information (state or organizational secrets) or to restricted areas, after completion of a thorough background check. The term “security clearance” is also sometimes used in private organizations that have a formal process to vet employees for access to sensitive information. A clearance by itself is normally not sufficient to gain access; the organization must also determine that the cleared individual needs
